OSBA launches Capital Conference FAQ webpage
The COVID-19 pandemic has generated many questions about the OSBA Capital Conference, set for Nov. 8-10 in Columbus. The conference is scheduled to take place as it has for the past 64 years and will feature keynote speakers, over 170 learning sessions and many networking opportunities. In response to questions about the conference, OSBA has set up an FAQ page at http://conference.ohioschoolboards.org/faq. The page addresses questions about how seating will be arranged, the Student Achievement Fair, the Trade Show and more. For questions not specifically mentioned, there is a link to a list of OSBA staff members who can address them. If state orders and guidelines do not allow an in-person conference, OSBA will provide alternatives for continued professional development.

Free virtual labs designed to help schools address reopening challenges
The 2020-2021 school year will be unlike any previous year. Guidance about when and how to reopen school buildings will evolve over the summer months, but there is no time to waste in addressing logistical changes, such as social distancing, personal hygiene and environmental cleanliness. That’s why the Ohio STEM Learning Network and EnvisionEdPlus are partnering to conduct a series of free Re-Start Re-Design Labs this month. The labs are virtual sessions scheduled to run from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on June 11, June 16 and June 26. They will focus on how schools can use time, facilities and technology to maximize the positive impact educators have on students and their families while keeping everyone safe. For details, including an agenda and a registration link, visit http://links.ohioschoolboards.org/12067.

CDC updates its school reopening guidelines
The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) has updated its interim guidance on how schools and other establishments can safely open during the COVID-19 pandemic. The CDC’s Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) Considerations for Schools guidelines specifically cover reopening schools and “are meant to supplement — not replace — any state, local, territorial or tribal health and safety laws, rules and regulations with which schools must comply.” The school guidelines are posted at http://links.ohioschoolboards.org/38484.

AG still offering violence prevention resources
The Ohio Attorney General’s Office reminds districts that it is providing new resources to help prevent targeted violence in schools. They include training materials and small grants. The training provides guidance on using threat assessment protocols, which are recognized as an effective means to enhance targeted violence prevention efforts. It is provided in a series of 10 video installments and a printed reference guide. School resource officers or other law enforcement personnel with primary responsibilities that include school safety may receive a $500 grant when they complete the training and agree to help form or participate on a school-based threat assessment team. The grants are designed to help local schools build their own threat assessment teams. For details, visit http://links.ohioschoolboards.org/45952.

For school administrators and board members, summer often provides opportunities to finish projects and manage the details necessary for closing the books on the current academic year. Unlike any other before, this summer will require board members and administrators to be as in sync as possible as they consider and make decisions on safely reopening buildings. Current hot topics include confirming communication protocols, reaffirming board and administrative roles, recommitting to district goals or discussing new ways to engage stakeholders. In light of the challenges of the past few months, summer is a great time to consider a community survey, goal setting, redefined performance objectives and discussions of program evaluation and district performance.

Another opportunity to consider is summer board retreats and workshops. Whether conducted in person or virtually, these sessions can allow for more in-depth discussions than is possible in regular board meetings. These leadership team discussions can improve the relationships and dynamics of doing the district’s governance work.

Strategic planning is another productive summer activity. Launching a planned, formal and community-oriented strategic planning process helps districts gain clarity on how best to use current resources and build investment well into the future.

OSBA is pleased to present facilitated training opportunities this summer at a discount to its members. Retreats and customized

A disagreement between the Trump administration and school districts across the country threatens to jeopardize hundreds of millions of dollars in federal funding intended for school districts.

The Coronavirus Aid, Relief and Economic Security (CARES) Act created a new Education Stabilization Fund totaling $30.75 billion, $13.5 billion of which is directed to the Elementary and Secondary School Emergency Relief Fund. The money in the latter fund is distributed in grants to states for use by local education agencies (LEAs).

The distribution method is based on the federal Title I, Part A formula, with $489.2 million of the federal fund being allocated to Ohio and $440.3 million of that amount being distributed to LEAs for use through Sept. 30, 2022. Districts must set aside a portion of their grant amounts for equitable services for nonpublic schools. That apportioned amount is now in question as federal guidance appears to conflict with the language of the CARES Act.

On April 30, the U.S. Department of Education (USDOE) issued nonbinding guidance on equitable services for nonpublic schools. In that guidance, USDOE argues a broad interpretation of the federal legislation that upends the long-held practice where the determination for set-aside amounts for Title I funding is based on the number of low-income students served by the nonpublic school. USDOE argues that the language of the CARES Act allows for the determination of the amounts to be based on the total enrollment of the nonpublic institution.

The result of such guidance is that nonpublic schools would receive a substantially larger and inequitable amount of funding, much more than Congress intended and much more than school districts anticipated based on the federal legislation. Nonpublic schools in Louisiana, for example, would receive at least 267% more funding under the USDOE’s guidance than they would if allocations were made in accordance with normal federal law allocations.

The USDOE guidance, in part, states, “Using enrollment to determine the proportional share from which to provide equitable services will contribute to the equitable treatment of children and teachers within the statutory universe of permissible uses for CARES Act dollars by allowing all students and teachers in a nonpublic school to receive services that are equitable compared to those available to all public school students and teachers.”

The guidance, which does not have the force of law, was swiftly met with opposition by public school groups from across the country and has been ignored by some state education agency directors. In a May 5 letter from the Council of Chief State School Officers, Executive Director Dr. Carissa Moffat Miller requested that Secretary of Education Betsy DeVos clarify her office’s guidance. Arguing that nonpublic allocations should be made based the number of low-income students served by the nonpublic school, Miller cites the federal legislation’s provision that equitable services be provided “in the same manner as provided under section 1117 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act (ESEA) of 1965.”

“Normally,” Miller continued, “(Under) Section 1117 of ESEA, as interpreted by (USDOE) consistently over decades and as recently as October 2019, the LEA calculates the required equitable participation of nonpublic schools based on the number of low-income children in each participating nonpublic school in the LEA.”

Several weeks later, DeVos responded. In a May 22 letter, she

Pickerington Local Schools’ bands unite for ‘amazing’ finish

More than 100 members of Pickerington Local’s (Fairfield) two high school marching bands concluded their musical education with a virtual performance to help bring the community together.

The YouTube performance of “Amazing Grace” featured 140 students from Pickerington Central and North high schools.

“Even though we cannot be together physically, it is very important for our students to continue to collaborate and share their love of music with our community,” district Music Coordinator Marc Parulekar told a local newspaper. “When the ‘brick-and-mortar’ school year was suspended in March, our team wanted to find ways to create performance experiences for our students.”

With school-issued computers or devices, each musician recorded his or her part. Performers used the popular Acapella App to record the videos.

Parulekar and his staff then used iMovie to produce the final product, which can be viewed at http://links.ohioschoolboards.org/32707. The performance even captured the attention of Gov. Mike DeWine, who closed his May 14 press conference with the video to honor fallen police officers, members of the military and others.

defended her office’s guidance and also disagreed with Miller’s interpretation of the law.

DeVos posited, “(The) services that an LEA may provide under the CARES Act programs are clearly available to all public school students and teachers, not only low-income students and their teachers ... Therefore, to make services equitable in comparison to public school students, it follows that the same principles must apply in providing equitable services to all nonpublic school students and teachers.”

She concluded that “(it) is reasonable to determine that the proportional share of CARES Act funds should be budgeted for equitable services based on enrollment.”

The largest revelation in her letter was not her office’s legal defense of the guidance, but that she would be issuing a federal rule on this topic in the coming weeks, effectively giving the controversial guidance the force of law.

In Ohio, the situation is just as fluid. On May 1, the Ohio Department of Education (ODE) sent a letter to school administrators through its grant applications portal that listed preliminary set-aside allocation amounts for nonpublic equitable services. Those funding amounts were based on the total enrollment of the nonpublic institution, seemingly in accordance with the controversial federal guidance. Two weeks later, ODE issued another letter saying it was reevaluating its original, preliminary allocation estimates.

After another two weeks, ODE, on May 29, acknowledged that the aforementioned federal rule that is forthcoming will take months to become effective and that districts should determine the appropriate equitable service amounts for its eligible nonpublic schools under both scenarios. That is, districts should plan for two allocation amounts, one based on the number of low-income students served by the nonpublic schools and another based on the total enrollment of the nonpublic institutions.
