

BRIEF CASE

THE OHIO SCHOOL BOARDS ASSOCIATION

Serving the public school leadership team

Time running out to preregister for OSBA Capital Conference

The deadline to preregister for the 55th annual Capital Conference is noon on Friday, Nov. 5. After that date attendees must register on-site at the Greater Columbus Convention Center. To preregister, contact Ann Herritt at (614) 540-4000 or (800) 589-OSBA. Remember, districts registering more than six people can bring an unlimited number of attendees for no additional cost. The Capital Conference, one of the nation's top education conventions, is Nov. 7-10. For further information, visit cc.ohioschoolboards.org.

Top speakers, outstanding sessions await you in Columbus

The 2010 Capital Conference offers this great slate of keynote speakers: Olympian and child advocate Dorothy Hamill; Herman Boone and Bill Yoast, the inspirational coaches portrayed in the film "Remember the Titans"; and leadership expert Mark Scharenbroich. Alan November leads the Early Bird Workshop; the luncheon speakers are Vince Lombardi Jr., son of the legendary football coach, and Mallory Holtman and Sara Tucholsky, founders of the Sportsmanship Defined Foundation. The luncheons and Early Bird Workshop require special registration; see your treasurer to register.

OSBA hosting Center of Science and Industry reception during conference

OSBA is offering a new evening event during this year's Capital Conference: a reception at the Center of Science and Industry (COSI) in downtown Columbus. The event, on Nov. 9 from 5:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., includes appetizers and refreshments, access to all COSI exhibits and plenty of time to network with school district leaders from across Ohio. Shuttle buses will run continuously between the convention center and COSI to transport conference attendees. For details on COSI, visit www.cosi.org.

Ohio gets $52 million for teacher performance pay in high-need schools

Ohio has been awarded $52.7 million over five years through the U.S. Department of Education's Teacher Incentive Fund (TIF). According to the Ohio Department of Education (ODE), these funds will be used to expand Ohio's TIF efforts to support the development and implementation of performance-based teacher and principal compensation in high-need schools. ODE has partnered on this program with Battelle for Kids and 24 school districts representing large urban areas, rural Appalachia and small-to-medium districts throughout the state.

Over 160 buildings named State Superintendent's Schools of Promise

The Ohio Department of Education has announced that 161 Ohio schools have been named State Superintendent's Schools of Promise based on 2009-10 Local Report Card results. These schools have excelled through rigorous coursework and a strong system

State Board to honor Student Achievement Fair participants

State Board of Education members will visit OSBA Student Achievement Fair booths during the Capital Conference and present certificates of appreciation to recognize the hard work of students, educators and school districts who have contributed their programs, talents and time to the fair. The Student Achievement Fair is open from 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 9.

Nearly half of districts in survey use pay-to-participate

An Ohio High School Athletic Association (OHSAA) survey found that of the 363 school districts responding to a survey, 44.9% charged some form of pay-to-participate fees. The fees range from $20 to $660, with $141.75 being the average, OHSAA reported.

Use Twitter, Facebook to share conference observations

Capital Conference attendees can use Twitter and Facebook to share their conference experiences with others. Include “#CC10” in your tweet to share your feedback on Twitter. You also can post and view updates on the OSBA Facebook page.

First day of school not what new principal expected

On the day he was supposed to be greeting students for the first day of school in his new job as a Massachusetts elementary school principal, Mark Nardelli was greeting one special child — his newborn daughter. And, their first meeting wasn’t in a maternity ward, it was in the front seat of a car.

Nardelli’s wife, Christine, a teacher, woke him about 1 a.m. and told him their baby was on the way. The couple hopped in the car and sped off toward the hospital, but the baby had other plans. Nardelli pulled off the road, called 911 and grabbed a blanket, just in time for the arrival of Alora Grace Nardelli.

State police were on the scene two minutes after the 911 call, but the healthy, happy baby girl was faster.

SchoolComp Safety Seminar

Friday, Dec. 3

Cost: $120

OSBA office, Columbus 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Earlier this year, the Ohio Bureau of Workers' Compensation (BWC) announced a new 10-step safety program that all employers will have to shift to. This seminar will highlight those 10 steps and discuss the changes school districts can expect and how to best comply with the new rules. A BWC representative will be on hand to answer questions and discuss school-specific challenges that are arising.

Another aspect of school safety involves the Public Employers Risk Reduction Program (PERRP) and how it applies to schools. In the past year, several schools underwent inspection programs by PERRP that focused on confined spaces, so that topic will be addressed as well. Finally, PublicSchoolWORKS, which offers a comprehensive, fully automated risk management system for schools, will discuss its services and how it integrates with the new 10-step model. Please join us for this important and informational seminar.

Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m. To register, call OSBA at (614) 540-4000 or (800) 589-OSBA. You also can register online at www.ohioschoolboards.org under the "OSBA Events" link.

Explore new worlds at the OSBA COSI reception

As part of the Capital Conference, OSBA will host an evening reception at the Columbus Center of Science and Industry (COSI) on Tuesday, Nov. 9. The event, held from 5:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., will include access to all of COSI's exhibits and plenty of opportunities to network and share with board members and administrators from across the state.

Shuttles will be available at the convention center shuttle station, located at the top of the escalators. The shuttles will transport attendees to and from COSI on a continuous basis.

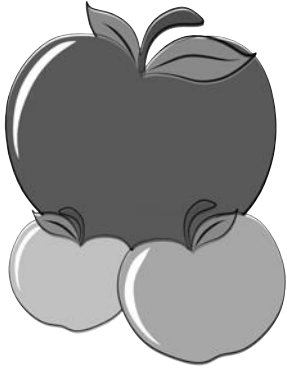

This event is open to conference attendees only; a conference name badge is required to attend. Light hors d'oeuvres and refreshments will be available.

To learn more about COSI, visit www.cosi.org.

This event is sponsored by CompManagement Health Systems Inc. and Ennis, Roberts & Fischer Co. LPA.

Management Development Series #4:

Implementing Healthy Choices for Healthy Children (SB) 210 — It may not be as bad as you think!

Tuesday, Dec. 7
OSBA office, Columbus

10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.
Cost is $75

Senate Bill (SB) 210 is causing quite a stir in school districts around the state. Body mass index (BMI) screenings, nutrition consultations and guidelines, physical activity reporting and report card information are all pieces of this giant puzzle. Fortunately, there are school districts that are already doing these things and experts in the educational community that can help your district.

Attend this workshop to learn how some school districts in northeast Ohio have navigated the rocky waters of BMI screenings with the help of the Cleveland Clinic. Learn from the Ohio Department of Education what is actually expected and required from school districts. Hear from the School Nutrition Association how it is helping school districts implement the nutritional guidelines of the bill.

Registration will begin at 9:45 a.m. The registration fee will include materials, lunch and refreshments. Space is limited, so register today!

School Finance for Treasurers Seminar

2010 Capital Conference and Trade Show

Celebrate student success

Nov. 7, 8, 9 & 10, 2010 • Greater Columbus Convention Center

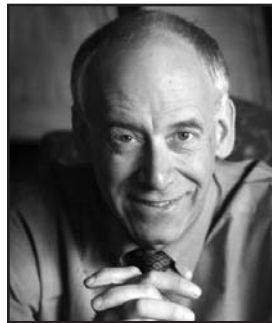

Don't miss the chance to attend these three outstanding presentations at the 2010 OSBA Capital Conference and Trade Show. These superlative speakers are sure to send you home with fresh ideas on leadership, education, youth and the challenges of the 21st century.

Early Bird Workshop with Alan November, Sunday, Nov. 7, 2:30 p.m.

Alan November, an international leader in education technology, has been director of an alternative high school, computer coordinator, technology consultant and university lecturer. He also was one of the original five national Christa McAuliffe Educators. A prolific writer, his books include Web Literacy for Educators and Empowering Students With Technology.

November's personable nature, coupled with astute observations on economics, education and technology, make him a powerful presenter. For him, it's not the technology itself that is important, it's how we use it. His ideas on global communication, collaboration, assessment and critical thinking have inspired schools, governments and corporations around the world to redefine their approach to education and technology.

November is an expert in planning across the curriculum, staff development, new school design, community building, leadership development and educational practices.

Alan November

Vince Lombardi Jr.

Mallory Holtman & Sara Tucholsky

Conference Luncheon with Vince Lombardi Jr., Monday, Nov. 8, 12:15 p.m.

The son of NFL coach Vince Lombardi blends his childhood experiences with his father and his adult experiences in law, politics and pro football to create an inspiring message about the qualities found in high-performing people.

Armed with a personal knowledge of his late father's leadership techniques and a powerful stage presence, Vince Lombardi Jr. continues a family legacy of leading others to better lives. He has the remarkable ability to teach leaders how to put people ahead of the organization, enabling individuals to do what they do best without losing sight of team goals. You'll be inspired by the son of a true leadership legend.

Conference Luncheon with Mallory Holtman & Sara Tucholsky, Tuesday, Nov. 9, 12:15 p.m.

The Mallory Holtman & Sara Tucholsky Sportsmanship Defined Foundation was created after a home run brought the women together on a college softball field in 2008. That twist of fate sparked an amazing display of sportsmanship and inspired Holtman and Tucholsky to create a foundation to help those in need.

On that day, Holtman and Tucholsky were on opposing teams when Tucholsky hit the first home run of her career. When she hurt her knee and was unable to run after crossing first base, Holtman and a teammate carried her around to home plate. That show of sportsmanship brought them widespread media attention, enabling them to parlay their fame into a way to motivate others with their spirit and caring.

To register for the Early Bird Workshop or luncheons

The cost for the Early Bird Workshop, featuring Alan November, is $75. Due to limited seating, preregistration is required. Walk-ins are accepted on a space-available basis.

Registration for each luncheon is $50. Doors open at 12:15 p.m., but the speakers will not begin until 12:45 p.m., which provides plenty of time to travel from the general sessions to the luncheons. On-site tickets ($55) will be sold at the Information Station on a space-available basis.

To register for any of these events, notify your district superintendent or treasurer, or indicate your request on the conference registration forms that were mailed in July.

TECHNOLOGY

by John Laws, executive director of technology, Lakota Local (Butler)

The pad wars are coming

The outbreak of pads has begun with the introduction of the iPad, to be followed by this pad and that pad and all the other pads. Are these computing devices everything they are hyped up to be? Maybe yes and maybe no!

According to Moore's law on technology, computing power will double every 18 to 24 months, manifesting itself in the continuous stream of updated computing gear paraded in front of technology-hungry educators. The marketing is second to none and the "want" by teachers is strong. But should everyone step to the vendor's beat and start trading in their laptops for pads?

The primary question is, "how do you plan to use the pad?" Is it a research tool for students? A digital reader? Can you replace a teacher's laptop with a pad? Can it be used in place of a pad of paper? These questions need to be addressed before investing in a new technology without a proven track record.

Here are a few questions to ask an administrator who suggests that pads are the way to go in your school district:

- What current computing devices will the pads replace?
- Will the pads run all the software that we need to support instruction?
- Can we expect to receive five years of service from a pad?
- Do the pads have the hardware capabilities we have with our laptop or desktop computers?
- What is the cost per pad versus the cost for a laptop or desktop computer?

As you can see, the primary considerations are how and where a pad would fit into a school environment. While sleek and "cool," pads need to be evaluated based on the instructional requirements, purchase price and return on investment (ROI). School districts have come to rely on laptop carts and computer labs as multifunctional computing classrooms. Pads probably won't fit

PUBLIC SCHOOLS WORK!

compiled by Gary Motz, managing editor

School bus reading program promotes learning and safety

Inspired by a TV news story, a North Fork Local (Licking) school bus driver decided she would start a reading program for her young passengers. Terri Glassburn shared the idea with Superintendent Scott Hartley and Transportation Supervisor Dale Broseus and received enthusiastic approval to move ahead.

The program encourages students to read books, magazines, spelling lists, study guides and other materials. Once they are home, students write summaries of what they read on their ride. In the first two days Glassburn collected 13 summaries, which she gave to teachers to show them what their kids accomplished on the bus.

The driver kicked off the program by giving her riders homemade bookmarks personalized with their names and bearing the phrase, "I'm proud of you." Glassburn plans to give further incentives, including a grand prize to be presented to one student each month.

Not only does the program encourage reading, it also promotes safety, because students who are in their seats reading are less likely to misbehave. With the bus holding the equivalent of more than two classrooms of children, the program also extends the learning day for dozens of students.

The district hopes to expand the program to other buses and has launched a book drive.

So when and where would a pad become beneficial for students? Pads have a "wow" factor and sometimes this alone encourages students to use technology for learning. Pads work well for reading digital books, researching information on the Web or watching short video clips. One way to look at it is if you don't need a keyboard to accomplish the work, a pad may be the right choice.

Here are a few questions to gauge the viability of pads in your district:

- Do your buildings provide adequate wireless capabilities to support pads?
- Can you afford to support different sets of hardware to accomplish instruction?

- Will your teachers be able to adapt instruction to make use of the pads?
- Does the cost of the pad meet your ROI for technology hardware?
- Will the pads you buy today still be effective teaching instruments in three years?

In the next two years you can expect to see an explosion of pads with increased speed, interoperability with external hardware (keyboards, USB devices, etc.) and a growing catalog of instructional software written specifically for these devices. Make no mistake about it — pads are here to stay, but before you jump into the "land of pads" make certain you have asked all the right questions and received all the right answers. Happy padding!
