Study: U.S. on track to reach 90% high school graduation rate by 2020

The “2014 Building a Grad Nation” report found that if the national graduation rate continues to rise at the same rate it has since 2006, it will reach 90% by 2020. The national graduation rate hit an all-time high of 80% in 2012, with significant gains seen among minority students. The report also notes that these increases have come as standards to graduate have become more rigorous. The report is available at http://links.ohioschoolboards.org/91600.

Scores of Ohio high schools ranked among the best in U.S.

Nearly 250 Ohio schools were ranked among the U.S. News & World Report Best High Schools for 2014. Of those, 22 were awarded gold medals, 93 earned silver medals and 129 received bronze medals. Medals were awarded based on performance on state assessments and how well schools prepare students for college. The rankings include data on more than 19,400 public high schools in 50 states and the District of Columbia. To view the Ohio rankings, visit http://links.ohioschoolboards.org/52254.

Retired superintendent named new manager for OSBA Central Region

Dr. Kimberley Rae Miller-Smith has been hired as regional manager for the OSBA Central Region. Miller-Smith served as superintendent at Canal Winchester Local (Franklin) from 2007 until her retirement in 2012. An educator for more than 30 years, she also has served as a teacher, library media specialist, assistant principal, assistant superintendent and university instructor and director. She replaces Dr. Michael G. Grote, who resigned in August to take an educational consultant position.

Report provides districts tips for doing more with less

A policy guide issued by the District Management Council offers suggestions on ways school districts can maximize their resources during a time of increasing financial constraints. “Spending Money Wisely: Getting the Most From School District Budgets” details 10 “high-impact opportunities” to help school systems do more with less. Analysis finds more than $100 million in charter school fraud

A report recently released by the Center for Popular Democracy and Integrity in Education shows that fraudulent charter school operators in 15 states are responsible for losing, misusing or wasting more than $100 million in taxpayer money. The report analyzes news reports, criminal complaints and other sources to detail how, in just 15 of the 42 states that have charter schools, including Ohio, charter operators have used school funds illegally to buy personal luxuries for themselves, support their other businesses and inflate their payrolls. Download the report at http://links.ohioschoolboards.org/85116.

OSBA SE Region seeking recognition nominations

Southeastern Ohio districts are urged to submit nominations for the 2014 OSBA Southeast Region Recognition Program. The region selects outstanding individuals and initiatives to honor at its fall conference. Categories are: student program, female student, male student, faculty member, classified staff member, treasurer, volunteer, administrator and new program. Honorees will be recognized at the Southeast Region Fall Conference on Sept. 25 at Alexander Local (Athens) in Albany. Nomination forms have been sent to board presidents and are posted at www.ohioschoolboards.org/se-region. For details, contact Paul D. Mock, regional manager, at (740) 385-5240 or pmock@ohioschoolboards.org. The deadline is June 30.

Free seminar will address sports event security issues

OSBA is among several groups supporting the Ohio High School Athletic Association’s free Safe Sport Zone seminar June 11 in Newark. Safe Sport Zone is a program to help secondary schools address security and safety issues arising at after-school athletic events. For details visit http://links.ohioschoolboards.org/81928.

New OSBA Pocket Calendars en route to member districts

The 2014-15 OSBA Pocket Calendar is being mailed to school district treasurers. School board members who don’t receive their calendars soon should contact their treasurers.

More than 200 school board members enjoyed two days of learning, sharing and camaraderie at the 13th annual OSBA Board Leadership Institute (BLI). The event ran May 2-3 at the Hilton Columbus/Polaris.

BLI is designed exclusively for board members by their fellow board members. The curriculum is developed at the Board Leadership Institute Focus Group meeting held each November during the OSBA Capital Conference and Trade Show. It is Ohio’s only major training event designed just for school board members.

The institute opened with greetings and comments from OSBA President Susie Lawson, Tri-County ESC and Wayne County Schools Career Center; Executive Director Richard Lewis; and Deputy Executive Director Rob Delane. Lawson also introduced the General Session speaker.

The Friday-Saturday event featured keynote speakers Dr. Mike Thomson and state Sen. Randy Gardner (R-Bowling Green). A last-minute addition to the program was Ohio Lt. Gov. Mary Taylor, who shared details of the governor’s Start Talking! campaign to combat drug abuse. For more information on that initiative, visit www.starttalking.ohio.gov.

Attendees could choose from 18 breakout sessions organized into six learning tracks. Learning track topics were: student achievement, finance, critical issues, board development, legal/legislative and hot topics. Experts in those fields from around the state led the sessions. A new feature this year, a flash drive containing handouts from all of the sessions, enabled attendees to take home information from seminars they couldn’t attend.

Before, between and after workshops, participants found plenty of time to discuss their ideas, successes and challenges with each other. Two breakfasts and luncheons offered additional networking time. An on-site OSBA Bookstore provided further learning opportunities. Attendees also met with OSBA regional managers to find out more about activities in their regions.

Treasurers

Grandview Heights City Treasurer Tammy Rizzo announced her resignation effective April 18. Southeast Local (Wayne) hired Mark Dickerhoof as interim treasurer effective May 1. He replaces Sandy Hadsell, who is taking the treasurer position at Norwayne Local (Wayne) effective June 1. Hadsell is replacing Robert Rinehart, who has taken the assistant treasurer position at Cleveland Heights-University Heights City. Dickerhoof will continue his role as treasurer at Green Local (Wayne), Orrville City and Rittman EV.

Sympathies

Former Cincinnati City Board of Education member Dr. Florence Newell died April 1. She was 70. Former Elyria City Board of Education member Herman Larkins died May 4. He was 81. Former Maysville Local (Muskingum) Board of Education member G. William Thompson died April 26. He was 76. Former Oregon City Board of Education member Edward W. Berger died April 29. He was 89.
Members were able to learn more about OSBA’s new Stand Up for Public Schools campaign to promote the importance of public schools and locally elected boards of education. A number of attendees had their photos taken while holding signs promoting the campaign with such slogans as: “School boards strengthen public education,” “I believe in public education” and “Who I am today began with public education.”

Those photos and others from BLI are posted on OSBA’s Flickr page at http://links.ohioschoolboards.org/18422.

“Once again, the feedback from Board Leadership Institute attendees was extraordinary,” Delane said. “It’s clear that school board members find something very special about a training event that focuses solely on their needs and challenges.

“I heard great comments on everything from how in-depth the curriculum was to the timeliness of the topics to the expertise of the presenters. That motivates us to develop an even better BLI for next year.”

“I was really pleased to see how many school districts sent multiple members to the institute,” Lewis said. “It’s very gratifying to see and hear how much our members value the Board Leadership Institute. Also gratifying is how dedicated they are to pursuing the best board training they can get.”

Several districts had the complete, or nearly complete, participation of their boards. Districts sending all five board members to BLI were: Campbell City; Champion Local (Trumbull); Greenfield EV; and Hamilton County ESC.

The districts from which four of five members attended were: Ashtabula County ESC; Big Walnut Local (Delaware); Miami Trace Local (Fayette); New Miami Local (Butler); North Baltimore Local (Wood); and Xenia Community City.

Thirteen other boards sent three members, and many newly elected school board members came to Columbus for their first BLI.

OSBA would like to thank BLI sponsors CompManagement Inc., which sponsored the May 2 luncheon with Taylor, and CompManagement Health Systems Inc., which sponsored the May 3 luncheon with Gardner. Following are recaps of Thomson’s and Gardner’s presentations.

Opening General Session
Dr. Mike Thomson
‘Strategies for saving your sanity’

“How many of you have sat through dull, dry and boring talks?” Dr. Mike Thomson said in kicking off his May 2 General Session talk. After watching nearly every hand in the room go up he said, “This will not be one of those.”

And he went on to prove it with a lively, enlightening and extremely funny presentation.

Better known as “Dr. Mike,” Thomson has dedicated his career to education and helping people. The internationally acclaimed author and speaker has worked as a psychologist, consultant, coach, educator and university professor.

He co-hosted the NBC special “The Learning Lunchbox,” with Patricia Richardson, who played the mother on the hit TV sitcom “Home Improvement.” The TV and DVD program is aimed at helping parents prepare their kindergarten through eighth-grade kids for academic excellence. He also hosted the award-winning PBS series “In Search of Character,” which schools use around the world to raise the bar for good character.

“I’ve spent my entire life in schools,” Thomson said. “I love kids.” However, today’s youth present challenges not always seen in previous generations.

“How many feel like they live on a different planet?” he asked. “When we were kids, we did what we were told. Now what do we hear from kids? ‘No way, man’ … ‘whatever’ … ‘you’re not the boss of me.’”

He went on to cite other major changes society has undergone: social media, a growing culture of disrespect and school violence. School boards must deal with all these challenges and more.

He went on to cite other major changes society has undergone: social media, a growing culture of disrespect and school violence. School boards must deal with all these challenges and more.

“As a school board member, you’re going to deal with a lot of junk,” Thomson said. “And if you don’t have a strategy to save your sanity, it’s going to be a tough business.

“You want your schools to be successful, your staff to be successful, your kids to be successful. But, we have to model that and teach that.”

He offered attendees three key themes to remember: the only people with problems are dead, the world is filled with jerks and in a tornado, even a turkey can fly.

“If you’re not dead, you’re going to have problems,” he said. “As a school board member, you have to learn that and you have to teach it to others.”

Dealing with problems comes down to choices, Thomson said. Successful people examine the choices, shift their focus forward and leave the negative behind.

He turned next to jerks.

“People can be mean, nasty, disgusting and despicable. They’ll not only stab you in the back, they’ll stab you in the front. They can instantly smear you on Instagram, Twitter, Facebook and text messages with any rumor they want to tell about you.

“But I love jerks now, you know why? Because they teach me how not to be a jerk.”

And finally, flying turkeys.

“What that means is that you’re never stuck unless you choose to feel stuck,” he said. “Don’t ever give up … look for opportunities. Walt Disney pitched his plans for Disneyland 302 times before he succeeded. Harlan Sanders —

Colonel Sanders — was 66 years old, living in his car and failed more than 1,000 times before he sold his idea. Thomas Edison, reflecting on his 10,000 failures said, ‘I learned 10,000 things not to do.’”

Thomson also discussed his See-Share-Stop initiative to reduce bullying and deter violence. The program encourages students, staff and parents to step up and speak out against bullying and cyberbullying.

“We especially need to empower bus drivers and cafeteria workers, because they’re down at the grassroots, they hear and know what’s going on. By encouraging people to step up and speak up, maybe we can head off something.

“And we’ve got to teach people what kindness and caring and respect are all about. If you want the culture and climate of a school to change, people have to step up and say, ‘We don’t talk like (or) act like that here.’ We’ve got a lot of good people in our schools, but the good people have to step up.”

State Sen. Randy Gardner
Senator opposes changes to OTES bill; discusses Common Core by Crystal Davis, editor

Perhaps to the surprise of the more than 200 people attending his May 3 presentation, state Sen. Randy Gardner (R-Bowling Green) explained why he now opposes Senate Bill (SB) 229, which contains changes to the new Ohio Teacher Evaluation System (OTES) and still bears his name as a co-sponsor.

“In my 28-and-half years in the Statehouse, I have never had a piece of legislation go to the other chamber and be changed dramatically without my input, without even my knowledge,” Gardner said. “Amazing! It’s not typical of what happens at the Statehouse, it just isn’t.”

Gardner expressed frustration over the 32 amendments placed in the bill.
the bill after it passed out of the Senate by a 33-0 vote.

“I got a couple of emails from people around the state that couldn’t believe that I would introduce a bill like the one that is in the House Education Committee,” said Gardner, a former high school history and government teacher. “I am making it real clear … I am against SB 229, as substituted in the House of Representatives. I think it is probably not going to become law.

Now I hope the mid-budget review bill, House Bill 487, will include most of SB 229 within it, including maybe a couple of refinements, working with OSBA to improve it even further.”

But to make that happen, Gardner said he needs public education’s help.

“As far as I am concerned, so far what has happened on other side of the Statehouse has been literally ignoring teachers and school board members and administrators who came together on a pretty good idea, and I’m not going to just sit back and just tolerate that.

“I’m giving you basic lobbying 101. It gives a little extra pause for legislators to ignore people who also have a lot of other things going on in the community. When I get contacted by someone, my first thought is … if I say ‘no’ to him or her, what are the consequences? Make the consequences be kind of significant. You deserve that rapport and access to your members of the House and Senate. If you’ve asked for that access and haven’t gotten it, then it is time for a new senator or representative.”

Gardner also addressed the timing and criticism of the new Common Core State Standards.

“I think we need to step back from the Common Core standards and take a look at it for a year or so, or at least take the safe harbor provision where schools won’t be penalized because we may not be quite ready. But I don’t think I am ready to throw up my hands and say it can’t work. I think we will still find innovation, and that teachers will find ways to do things well. Most of the teachers and school officials I talk with believe that it has the ability to be something additionally positive in our schools.”

In response to a question from the audience, Gardner said he does not support the third-grade reading guarantee.

Ohio school board members steer their local districts on the path to success. They can have an impact on schools across the state by getting involved with OSBA leadership.

Members set the association’s policies and guide OSBA forward through statewide and regional leadership roles. These dedicated board members ensure the association meets the needs of its members and continues to provide the services and representation they expect.

Through involvement with OSBA leadership, members have the chance to share their perspective on challenges and opportunities facing public education in Ohio — and work with peers to address them. Many current regional and statewide committee members say their leadership roles offer a better perspective of statewide educational issues and give them the chance to network with board members in their region and around the state.

Each year, OSBA sends out the “Call for Nominations” brochure and asks board members to take on roles in the association. Some of these roles are as simple as meeting once at the OSBA Capital Conference and Trade Show to review the rules governing the Delegate Assembly. Some require you to attend meetings in your region. Others are more involved, requiring attendance at both regional and OSBA Board of Trustee meetings. Whatever amount of time you have to commit, there is a role for you with OSBA.

“I’ve been informed that there are a few who attended this conference and decided that since it is a nice sunny day, they may have gone back to their homes. I want you to know that if you sign a sheet on the way out, any school that stayed gets an increase in state aid!”

The crowd erupted into applause and laughter.

“Man, I wish I could do that,” Gardner said.
In addition to the midbiennium budget review legislation working its way through the Ohio General Assembly, another legislative proposal continues to gather steam in the House of Representatives.

House Bill 460 (HB), sponsored by Reps. Denise Driehaus (D-Cincinnati) and Andrew Brenner (R-Powell), is legislation that would encourage and engage parents and local community members in developing community learning centers (CLCs). The legislative proposal is based on Cincinnati City’s CLCs, and seeks to codify the centers as an education model that any Ohio school district could use to tailor community-specific services for its students.

The goal of a CLC is to bring wrap-around services to a school based on the needs of its families, residents, students, educators, business leaders and community members. Cincinnati’s model emphasizes fostering strong partnerships, sharing accountability for results, setting high expectations, building on the community’s strengths and embracing diversity.

According to Driehaus, “It is a model intended to be neighborhood-based and designed to address the needs of a particular school and community. Real reform must address the academic and nonacademic needs of children and their families with an array of services including: early childhood education, tutoring, health and dental needs, and recreational and mental health services.”

Specifically, HB 460 authorizes school districts to convert school buildings that meet certain low-performance criteria into CLCs. This criteria includes any building that is in “improvement status” as defined by the federal No Child Left Behind Act; any high school that is among the lowest achieving 15% of high schools statewide; any high school with a graduation rate of 60% or lower for three or more consecutive years; or any building that is not in “improvement status,” but is approved by the district school board to operate as a CLC.

For a school system to initiate the CLC process, the district must hold a public information hearing at the school building. At least 45 days following the hearing, the school board must conduct an election by the parents, teachers and staff assigned to the building. If at least 67% of each group support the initiative, the district must begin the transition to a CLC.

Once a CLC is approved by an election and is initiated, the school...
Deer Park schools partner with IBM, STEM collaborative

Deer Park Community City, IBM and the Greater Cincinnati STEM Collaborative (GCSC) are partnering to give students new and unique learning opportunities.

Over five months, 25 IBM employees will collaborate biweekly with small groups of students in grades seven through nine. The mentoring effort will give students the tools needed to flourish in education and their future endeavors.

“We are delighted that IBM, Cincinnati and Deer Park will collaborate to launch IBM MentorPlace,” said Dean Kuroff, IBM director, Global Process Services. “We have recruited an outstanding group of IBM employees who are committed to this community and eager to share their professional experience and knowledge with terrific students.”

IBM MentorPlace is a corporate volunteer program in which employees around the world provide students with online academic assistance and career counseling, while letting them know that adults do care about their issues and concerns.

“Everyone is working together to make the IBM eMentoring project a true, authentic learning experience for our students and it is a project that will benefit the Deer Park community for years to come,” said Superintendent Jeffery W. Langdon.

board must then create a school action team that will be responsible for certain duties that include: conducting a performance audit of the school; monitoring and assisting in implementing the CLC improvement plan; making recommendations for administrative positions; school budget advising; conducting an annual survey; developing a parent involvement policy; monitoring school progress; receiving school updates from the principal; meeting with parents and community members; and determining appropriate services or programs that may be provided by a community partner to students, families and community members.

In addition, the bill requires a school board to select a resource coordinator to assist in developing and coordinating CLC services.

The bill, as currently amended in the House Education Committee, also allows schools that do not meet the previously mentioned requirements to voluntarily develop CLCs. The bill has had four hearings in the House Education Committee since being introduced in February,
