

BRIEF CASE

THE OHIO SCHOOL BOARDS ASSOCIATION

Serving the public school leadership team

Ohio school board members elected to national posts at NSBA conference

Four Ohio board members were elected to key National School Boards Association positions during the April NSBA Annual Conference in San Francisco. Tawana Lynn Keels, Princeton City and Great Oaks ITCD, was elected chair-elect of the National Black Caucus of School Board Members. Catherine D. Ingram, Cincinnati City, was elected secretary-treasurer of the same group. The Council of Urban Boards of Education (CUBE) elected Willetta Milam, Cleveland Municipal, and Bruce D. Alexander, Akron City, to the CUBE Steering Committee. Other OSBA members and staff also played significant roles at the conference. See the May Journal magazine for details.

OSBA launching school board candidate campaign

This is a school board election year, and OSBA is encouraging qualified citizens to seek seats on their local school boards. The association is sending information to all county boards of elections and school district superintendents on school board elections, the roles and responsibilities of school board members and OSBA's candidate training programs and tool kits. For details, visit www.ohioschoolboards.org/candidate-for-school-boards or see the brochure in this issue of the Briefcase.

KidsOhio: High-poverty schools excel on fourth-grade reading test

The latest report from KidsOhio highlights the success of 58 high-poverty schools in which 90% or more of the economically disadvantaged fourth-graders passed the state's 2010 reading test. Statewide, only 71% of economically disadvantaged fourth-graders passed the test, compared with 90% who are not disadvantaged. The report can be downloaded at www.kidsohio.org. KidsOhio is a nonpartisan, nonprofit research and policy group specializing in improving public education.

Get involved — serve as a Capital Conference workshop moderator

OSBA is seeking breakout session moderators for the 2011 Capital Conference, Nov. 13-16, in Columbus. Board members serving as moderators introduce presenters, collect evaluation forms, act as liaisons between the audience and speakers, and earn five OSBA Award of Achievement credits. If interested, contact Judy Morgan at (614) 540-4000, (800) 589-OSBA or jmorgan@ohioschoolboards.org. The deadline is June 3.

Longtime OSBA staffer retires after nearly 30 years of service

Susan G. Tharp, OSBA administrative associate of policy services, retired on April 29 after more than 27 years of service with the association. Only five other OSBA employees in the association's 56-year history have served longer. Hired in 1983 as a receptionist, Tharp also worked as a secretary of search services and served with four of OSBA's six executive directors. In other staff news, Diana Paulins was promoted to administrative assistant of policy services.

Training sessions focus on supporting military children

The Ohio Department of Education and the Ohio National Guard are offering two sessions of a nationally recognized training program titled, Guard and Reserve Institute: Supporting Children of the National Guard and Reserve. The free sessions, conducted by the Military Child Education Coalition, are May 16-17 in Columbus and May 19-20 in Blue Ash, near Cincinnati. The program is appropriate for all educators, especially K-12 counselors, as well as service members and their families. Continuing education unit and graduate credits are available.

Obama surprises students who feared losing D.C. trip

President Barack Obama surprised a group of eighth-graders from a Colorado middle school on April 11, just days after they feared a federal shutdown would scuttle their trip to Washington.

"Now that things worked out, we figured we'd give you a little bonus," Obama told the students as they toured the White House.

In an April 8 speech he made after Congress reached a deal to keep the government running, the president mentioned a letter he received from Shalini Schane, whose son was among the students planning to come to Washington. Schane wrote to him about the fundraisers and projects the students did to prepare for the trip.

Obama told the students that education remains a priority, and is an area in which he wants to increase investments, not make cuts.

This month in OSBA history

An article in the May 1973 OSBA Journal magazine announced that the association had sold the building that had been its headquarters for 15 years. The converted house on the north side of Columbus was purchased in 1958 for $29,000 and sold for $48,000. The sale preceded OSBA's relocation to new offices in Westerville the following year. The new owners rented the building to the association until the new office building in Westerville was completed.

Community engagement: A powerful tool to improve your schools
Wednesday, May 25 at noon

Children whose communities are involved in their schools have a richer educational experience. School districts that collaborate with and engage their stakeholders benefit from a robust range of resources and support.

Successful community engagement is so much more than including parents in the PTA or school clubs. It embraces the entire community – businesses, policymakers, civic groups, alumni, residents without children in your schools and more. Engaging all aspects of your community taps into valuable resources that will improve your schools.

This webinar will be led by Jeff Phillips, Pickaway-Ross Career & Technology Center communications and community relations specialist. The veteran public relations and community engagement expert will examine the basics of community engagement, share the many tools he uses to get the public involved – and keep them involved – and discuss the benefits and challenges of building this valuable support system.

OSBA Deputy Director of Communication Services Crystal Davis Hutchins will host the webinar.

Register today by contacting OSBA's Laurie Miller at (614) 540-40000, (800) 589-OSBA or Lmiller@ohioschoolboards.org.

LEGISLATIVE REPORT

by Michelle Francis, lobbyist

House introduces its changes to budget bill

The House Finance and Appropriations Committee recently accepted Substitute (Sub.) House Bill (HB) 153, the House version of the state biennial budget bill. Some primary changes include:

- Capping district losses in state foundation aid at 20%, according to media reports; this affects only about 20 districts.
- The phase-down of the tangible personal property (TPP) tax and public utility tangible personal property (PUTPP) tax replacement payments would end after fiscal year (FY) 2013. The 2% cap rule for determining a district's phase-down for this budget remains the same as in the governor's proposal. This means that more than half of the districts will not be receiving reimbursement for TPP tax payments after this budget, and most districts lose their PUTPP tax reimbursement by the end of this budget. However, it appears that Sub. HB 153 does not phase down payments further beyond FY 2013 for those districts that still have payments remaining.
- Because of updated valuation data, a slight adjustment to the chargeoff valuation index used to calculate district-by-district reductions to account for the loss of federal State Fiscal Stabilization Fund (SFSF) dollars is contained in the substitute bill.

- The 2% contribution rate shift for retirement from employers to employees was removed from the bill.
- There are several new provisions that expand "choice" by expanding options for community schools and relaxing some accountability measures.
- Some "Senate Bill 5-like" provisions were added to the substitute bill.
- Removes the health care pooling provisions, but still requires the Department of Administrative Services to conduct a study.

When the substitute bill was introduced, OSBA, along with the Buckeye Association of School Administrators (BASA) and Ohio Association of School Business Officials (OASBO), sent an alert to members with information about the House's version. We provided links to a comparison document prepared by the Legislative Service Commission (LSC) showing the differences between the original version of HB 153 and the new substitute bill.

In addition, LSC updated its spreadsheets to reflect the changes as proposed by the House. You can review the changes in your state aid by accessing your district's figures at <http://ode>.

legislature.state.oh.us/stateaid_house. Please note that the state aid on this link is your foundation aid plus the reimbursements for your TPP and PUTPP taxes. For FY 2011, this includes SFSF. Any increase noted for your district is related to the change in the foundation formula proposed by the House Finance and Appropriations Committee.

After analyzing the changes proposed in the House's substitute bill, OSBA, BASA and OASBO presented joint testimony to the House Finance and Appropriations Committee. A complete copy of our testimony on Sub. HB 153 is available by going to www.ohio-schoolboards.org/129th-general-assembly and searching "HB 153." We will continue to keep you updated as the budget continues moving through the process.

Benchmarking report

OSBA, BASA and OASBO recently issued a joint press release criticizing a benchmarking study that claims schools are overlooking significant savings. An analysis prepared by Education Tax Policy Institute (ETPI) consultants refutes the study published by the KnowledgeWorks Foundation

Penta students train pet shop birds not to bite ... or curse

Two Penta Career Center students are translating their small animal care training into real-world experience.

Juniors Naomi Ortega and Summar Coogler are collaborating with a local pet shop to train the store's birds in the career center's animal science lab. Since birds are often frightened when placed into a new environment, the students work to acclimate them to different situations and prepare them to become well-behaved pets.

Instructor Nicole Costello arranged the partnership between Penta and Pet Supplies Plus. Costello, who was a trainer at the Toledo Zoo, ran a similar project at Toledo City Schools.

The students shared details of their project with Penta school board members last month. They told the board that, unlike other animals, birds show few signs that they are about to attack. And, they strike quickly and bite hard.

Ortega said that it takes a few days to acclimate the birds to the lab, and training them takes patience. Everyone in the lab works with the birds to get them used to being handled by different people.

Negative behavior sometimes involves things other than biting. Coogler said she worked with one bird that had learned "bad words." Since most people would not want a cursing bird, she helped it clean up its language.

subsidiary Ohio Education Matters that claims that schools are leaving more than $1 billion on the table because they are inefficient.

The associations commissioned the ETPI analysis because they were skeptical of the validity of the report: "Benchmarking Ohio's School Districts: Identifying districts that get more for their money in non-instructional spending." The benchmarking report has been repeatedly cited during the budget process by members of the governor's administration and legislators who claim that schools could save almost $1.4 billion.

The ETPI analysis confirms the three association's skepticism about the report by showing that it is inadequate because it fails to meet reasonable and professional standards for a benchmarking study. Additionally, ETPI's response highlights inconsistencies in the report's conclusions about individual districts and their overall operational efficiency.

A copy of the press release is available on the BillTracker page for HB 153 at www.ohioschoolboards.org/129th-general-assembly. A copy of ETPI's analysis and executive summary is available on the ETPI website at www.etpi-ohio.org.
